

Learning To Combat Global Terror

The terrorist attacks of Sept. 11 opened a number of career paths in defense, research and security fields for students and professionals on the Monterey Peninsula.

You can earn a master's degree in homeland defense or computer systems security at the Naval Postgraduate School (NPS) in Monterey, Calif., or earn an associate of arts degree in one of any languages at the Defense Language Institute at the Presidio of Monterey, or study trafficking in weapons of mass destruction at Monterey Institute of International Studies.

The Center for Homeland Security at NPS is offering a master's program beginning in November sponsored by the Department of Justice.

The course covers a wide range of subjects related to terrorism, security and civil-military relations. It is aimed at managers in local, state and federal government agencies.
